A Letter From the President...

Dear Friends,

Many years from now, when you are reminiscing with your family and friends, I hope you'll find occasion to retrieve this yearbook from the shelf and comb through its many pages. Contained within it will be vivid memories of your past, captured in colorful photographs and words. I'm sure that you will look back upon this important time in your life with great fondness, and that you'll have ample reason to say, "remember when..."

Your life undoubtedly changed significantly during your stay with us. You grew both as an individual and as a member of society. You experienced a wealth of new perspectives and ideas. You learned about a variety of other cultures and about your own special place in the world. You strived for academic excellence and surely had some fun along the way.

Though you may not have realized it at the time, your alma mater was also going through a period of remarkable growth. The aerial photograph on the front cover should serve as a reminder that you were here to see our campus transform itself. East Hall, the East Campus Commons, the Adrian Tinsley Center, and the clock tower pavilion were all completed during your time here; so, too, were the renovation of Harrington Hall and the electronic modernization of our many classrooms.

Beyond the expansion of the physical campus, your time at Bridgewater was one in which we: raised our level of prestige and became a college of choice; grew the size of our faculty at a time when most other institutions could barely hold the line; were tested by the onset of a severe fiscal crisis and came together as a strong college community; and sowed the seeds for tremendous advancement in the years to come.

I have no doubt that the Bridgewater State College of many years from now will look considerably different than the one you know now. You should take great comfort and pride in knowing that you inspired our institution's march forward, and that you contributed so much of your energy and enthusiasm towards making tomorrow's Bridgewater even better than today's.

Sincerely,

Dana Mohler-Faria
President

BSC Memorializes Dr. Ann Lydecker

The late Dr. Ann M. Lydecker, founding dean of the School of Education and Allied Studies who subsequently served five years as the college's chief academic officer, once again has a presence at her home away from home – Bridgewater State College.

A portrait of Dr. Lydecker, along with a quotation from her about the role of public higher education in the lives of its students, has been placed on a wall of the Moakley Center entrance to Hart Hall, which houses several programs from the school of education and the office of its dean.

The quote that appears on her portrait in Hart Hall was taken from a May 1997 appearance on a campus-produced television program. It reads: "My heart and soul are really with the state college student. I know for many of our students that we make a difference in their lives and we're going to make or break their future."

"Ann Lydecker is an individual that really touched this campus," said Bridgewater State College President Mohler-Faria. "As I think of what public higher education is about, I see Ann in the center of that. She was a person who made a tremendous difference."

Dr. Tinsley called Dr. Lydecker "a very special person. What was special about her was the way she led – from the heart. Her work came in a way that was very direct from her passions – her family, her love of education and people ... she knew education at all levels." On the same day Bridgewater State College marked the 50th anniversary of the National Council for the Accreditation of Teacher Education (NCATE), a space at the college was dedicated in her memory.

Celebration of the Clocktower

The East Campus at Bridgewater State College has an icon of its very own, grounded in the words of Horace Mann, founder of public higher education. The inscription, which also can be found on the West Campus icon, Boyden Hall, reads: "Coiled up in this institution, as in a spring ... there is a vigor whose uncoiling may wheel the spheres."

A four-sided clock tower, installed in early October, rises high in the air from the foot of Great Hill and is the culminating edifice of the college's recent building projects on its East Campus. The clock glows softly in the evening, as its four faces are illuminated by blue lights. Five rungs on each side lead up to the clock. Repellant wire spikes that frame the top of the rungs are meant to keep birds away.

Designed by the architectural firm Pfeufer/Richardson PC, and constructed by Trace Construction, Inc., over a period of several months, the clock tower is visible from virtually any point on campus.

The newest addition to the college's physical plant, the tower is surrounded by a concrete and marble plaza that also functions as a performance area.

The plaza, set up on a hill sown with fresh grass, overlooks the lawns that front East Hall and East Campus Commons.

CONVOCATION

History tells us that the concept of convocation is among the oldest and most cherished of academic traditions. Dating back to the founding of the first universities in Europe, convocation is a time when faculty, students and staff gather to celebrate and usher in the new academic year.

At Bridgewater State College, convocation is an exercise centered around the senior class, providing soon-to-be graduates the opportunity to pause and reflect back on their Bridgewater experiences. Moreover, the event serves to highlight the long service of the college's most distinguished faculty with the awarding of the president's medallion.

Last year's convocation ceremony was exceptionally well attended, as more than 400 people participated and approximately 100 faculty and administrators processed in full academic regalia.

In what has become an annual tradition, the college invites a distinguished alumna to address the convocation assembly. This year, we were pleased to welcome Mr. Mark England (Class of 1990). Mr. England is the Southeastern Massachusetts regional vice president for Enterprise Rent-A-Car. In that capacity, he supervises the operations of twenty-seven rental locations, eight support departments, and hundreds of personnel.

Mr. England began his Enterprise career in 1990 as a management trainee and has steadily advanced through the ranks of the company ever since. Prior to his graduation from BSC with a Bachelor of Science degree in Management Science, Mr. England served in the 101st Engineer Battalion of the Army National Guard. Students attending Bridgewater State College's Senior Convocation celebrated arriving at the home stretch of their college career and left with a challenge from alumnus Mr. England to sprint to the finish line, but relish their freedom.

"Chances are you'll never have a time like this again, so savor the ride," said Mr. England to the audience. The annual event began with a procession of faculty and administrators to the Rondileau Campus Center Auditorium, led by Dr. Janice Harris, college marshal. Dr. Harris, professor of movement arts, health promotion and leisure studies, was installed as marshal at last spring's Commencement, succeeding Dr. Wayne Phillips. In addition to honoring seniors, this year's Convocation highlighted contributions of BSC faculty. Dr. Dana Mohler-Faria, president of Bridgewater State College, and Mr. England both spoke of BSC faculty's critical role in shaping and supporting student development.

"You were not alone as you made this journey," President Mohler-Faria told seniors. "You had a very special group of people around you to hone your talents, sharpen your skills and broaden your perspective...The people of whom I speak, of course, are the incredible men and women who make up Bridgewater's faculty."

Winter Commencement

Filled with the inspirational words of national education expert Raymond McNulty, more than 600 graduates collected their diplomas Friday night at Bridgewater State College's Winter Commencement Convocation. During the ceremony approximately 500 undergraduate degrees and 152 graduate degrees were awarded. The ceremony was held in the Adrian Rondileau Campus Center Auditorium before an audience of more than a thousand friends and family members of the graduates. Mr. McNulty, 1973 BSC graduate, is a senior consultant for the New York-based International Center for Leadership in Education and executive director of its Successful Practices Network, and a senior fellow at the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation. Instead of sharing his theories on learning or leadership, Mr. McNulty said he chose a topic that was even closer to his heart – his mother and her homemade spaghetti sauce, or gravy, as the family called it. He recounted how she used to ship it to him in northern Vermont after he left home for his first teaching job. One day he asked for the recipe. "I put it all in the pot and did everything she told me, but it didn't taste like her gravy," he said. After several tries and more of the same, Mr. McNulty said he discovered something that would stick with him the rest of his life. "When my mom made gravy, it was an all-day event. People would stop by. She'd sing while she was stirring it. She loved making gravy," he said. "To her it was a passion. I was just throwing the ingredients together." He told the graduates that finding that passion in their lives was the real key to success. "When you leave here, everyday, do things you love to do," he said.

Dr. Dana Mohler-Faria, president of Bridgewater State College, spoke of the pride he felt at seeing the graduates take the next step in their lives. He expressed his hope that they will take what they've learned and better their lives and the world. "We are entrusting you with a historic responsibility: to raise the bar – both for yourself and for our society – ever higher," he said. "We are expecting great and wonderful things from you. Today is the day you embark upon your unique journey of surpassing those expectations." Addressing his fellow graduates, student speaker William DiPilato, a communication studies major from Northbridge, reflected on how life at the college changed them, and helped prepare each student to become a leader.

Also addressing the graduates was Dr. Judith Gill, chancellor of the state Board of Higher Education, who recalled her days at a public college in Massachusetts as the most important in her life. "Those years shaped me and made me the person I am today," she said, before congratulating the graduates.

David Jenkins, chairman of Bridgewater State College's Board of Trustees, told the graduates they'd been given the gift of education, and that they were to use them for "the advancement of the greater good." The Honorable Judge George N. Leighton, a New Bedford native of Cape Verdean descent, former member of the United States District Court and longtime champion of civil rights, was given an honorary degree. He was unable to attend the ceremony. Mr. McNulty left the new graduates with a few final words of wisdom, "in the world today, some people believe it's important to be the best in the world. What I want to tell you is to go out there and be the best for the world."

Spring Commencement

ool temperatures did not chill the excitement of the more than 1,000 graduates at the Bridgewater State College's 164th Spring Commencement ceremonies.

Dr. Dana Mohler-Faria, president of Bridgewater State College, asked graduates to make a promise, as they extend their hand to accept their degree, to take on the responsibility that comes with the reward. "The hopes of every generation begin with the promises made by individuals. As long as you hold true to the promise you make today, I have every confidence that yours will be the greatest generation our society has ever known." The theme of 'living a life in service to humanity' continued in the keynote address given by Milton J. Little Jr. president and chief executive officer of the United Way of Massachusetts Bay, who told graduates "your life will never truly have meaning if it is lived simply responding to the demands of others. Bridgewater's sacred walls have prepared you to be outstanding contributors to the civic life of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, the region, the nation and the world. Take action. Make these commitments to your community. Don't wait," said Mr. Little.

Ms. Andrea Braham of Brockton, in her student address, encouraged graduates to make a positive difference in the lives of others. "No matter our specific future destinations we must all continue to build and make positive differences in the world. Undoubtedly, our building blocks may become loose, our foundation may weaken, but I urge you to keep rebuilding knowing that your foundation will not fail you," said Ms. Braham.

"Society is counting on you to be its instrument for social justice and positive change. Lead ...volunteer ...mentor ...teach ...advocate ...inspire. These are the ways you follow-through on the promises you've made."

- President Mohler-Faria

Men's Soccer

Head Coach Brendan Adams had his team aimed at another MASCAC title run in 2004. In two seasons at the helm, Coach Adams has directed the soccer program to a 18-13-5 mark and an impressive 9-3-2 record against conference opponents. Despite losing to rival Worcester State in the MASCAC Tournament title game for the second straight season, Coach Adams felt that with a solid returning cast of seasoned veterans, the Bears was primed in taking the next step in 2004 as they took aim at an NCAA Tournament bid.

Women's Soccer

After back-to-back trips to the NCAA tournament, the Bridgewater State College women's soccer team had made its site on yet another appearance to the big dance. In her sixth season at the helm, Head Coach Andrea Zeigler was confident that her Bears were poised once again to take the MASCAC crown and made a return trip to the NCAA tournament. Coach Zeigler felt that this team, despite the loss of five key players including All-New England forward Kim Rhodes and All-MASCAC goalkeeper Maura Cacciatore, would contend for the conference title in 2004.

Volleyball

Coach Duarte feels that this year's team was the most enthusiastic team he has ever coached and had possibly the best recruiting class the program has ever had. Bridgewater play more than 35 matches during a tough, demanding schedule which, this season, included a trip to West Palm Beach, FL, for the Sunshine Classic.

The Bears hosted two tournaments in September and October and once again were been invited back to participate in the prestigious Hall of Fame Invitational at Mt. Holyoke College against some of the best Division III teams in New England.

Residence Life

Students who lived on campus this year were a part of a home community at BSC. Starting at the Shea and Durgin Halls to Pope Hall, Scott Hall, Woodward Hall, East Hall and finally to the Apartments. To stay on campus and make the dorm rooms to be like home isn't an easy task, but it is a sense of independence that one has in themselves to succeed in life.

Thank You

Thank you to everybody who helped make this book come alive.

To all my advisors, Karen Callan, Marie Murphy, Shelby Harris, Cindy Kane and Lina Macedo. There are a lot of you, but without all the continuous help all year, this book would not have been completed on time. And a special thanks to the rest of the Student Involvement and Leadership Office, without all of you, there wouldn't be any activities to cover for the book!

To the entire staff, thank you for all your help. There are many tasks that make up this book. All the pictures you took, all the layouts you did, all the countless hours will not go unforgotten!

Norval Garnett and Christina Garnett, and the rest of the staff at Jostens Publishing, thank you for all of your continuous support. It hasn't been an easy year with all the adjustments, but thank you for everything!

Caren Korin and the rest of the staff from DaVör Photography, thank you for all the pictures. There would be no pictures in this book if it wasn't for your digital camera and candid coverage for us, but now this book is filled with many pictures!

“The writing of a yearbook is like the creation of a novel. It needs a plot, a climax, and an ending. The plot is the theme of the yearbook, the climax is made up of all the special events, and the ending is graduation. The yearbook is a composite talent - it takes layouts, copy, pictures, advertisements, sales as well as typing and checking and rechecking. To decide what is important enough to be remembered, to make the moments of sadness and joy timeless and relivable in later times, is the job of the yearbook staff” Anonymous
